Revised January 2011

YOUR RIGHT TO MAKE HEALTH CARE DECISIONS is provided through the Colorado Hospital Association as a public service to the community.

This booklet informs you about your right to make healthcare decisions, including the right to accept or refuse medical treatment.

It provides you with ready-to-use forms on which to record your decisions about medical treatment and your choice of the person you want to make decisions for you when you cannot.

These forms, and any written instructions you make ahead of time about your medical treatment, are called advance directives. This booklet explains the following advance directives and related subjects:

- Substitute Decision Makers: Medical Durable Power of Attorney, Proxy Decision Maker, Guardians
- Living Will
- Cardio-pulmonary Resuscitation (CPR Directive)
- Medical Orders for Scope of Treatment

FEDERAL LAW REQUIRES THAT YOU MUST BE GIVEN information on advance directives at the time you are admitted by any hospital, nursing home, HMO, hospice, home health care, or personal care program that receives federal funds (Medicare). You must also be given written information on policies of that facility or provider concerning advance directives.

If your advance directive conflicts with the facility's policy or a particular healthcare professional's moral or religious views, the facility or professional must transfer you to the care of another which will honor your advance directives.

You are not required to have advance directives in order to receive care and treatment, or for admission to a facility. You must only be informed about them. Whether or not you have advance directives, you will receive the medical care and treatment you need.

The advance directive forms in this booklet are specific to Colorado. If you spend a lot of time in another state, you should find out if your Colorado advance directives will be honored there. You may need to complete a separate set of advance directives according to the laws of that other state.

If you have advance directives from another state, they may still be valid in Colorado. However, it is recommended that you prepare new advance directives under Colorado law.

Preparing and signing (or executing) an advance directive does not take away your right to decide what you want, if you are able to do so, or to provide input to decisions about your care at any time. You may change your mind at any time about anything you have written in an advance directive.

It's very important to review your advance directives every few years, to make sure your choices are still valid and that other information, such as contact information, is up to date.

Keep your advance directives in a place that is easy to get to—not in a safe deposit box. Give copies of your directives to family members and friends who may be involved in your medical care.

Take copies of your advance directives with you when you are checking in to a healthcare facility for any outpatient or inpatient procedure. Make sure your primary physician and any healthcare professional providing treatment have copies of your directives and know your wishes.

If you complete a CPR directive (see page 13), be sure it is kept in a visible and handy place in your home so that it can be given quickly to any emergency medical personnel.

By providing Your Right to Make Health Care Decisions the Colorado Hospital Association assumes no legal liability for the enforceability or validity of the documents in any individual situation. We regret we are unable to provide advice to you about how to complete the forms. Your healthcare providers or an attorney can give you specific guidance.

FEDERAL AND COLORADO STATE LAW both say that competent adults (those able to make and express decisions) have the right to:

- Receive information in a way they can understand about the risks; benefits, alternatives, and likely outcomes of any recommended medical treatment;
- Give consent to medical treatment;
- Refuse medical treatment at any time for any reason, even if refusing treatment might result in death;
- Make known their wishes regarding medical treatment in advance of needing the treatment;

- Appoint a person to make medical treatment decisions for them when they cannot.

This booklet explains these rights and provides you with the forms you need under Colorado law to document your choices for medical treatment, including life support, and to appoint substitute decision makers.

These are important personal healthcare decisions, and they deserve careful thought. It's a good idea to talk about them with your doctor or other healthcare providers, family, friends, and other advisors, such as spiritual, financial, or legal. However, you are not required to consult a lawyer to complete any of these forms, and only the CPR directive requires a physician's signature.

YOUR RIGHT TO INFORMED CONSENT Except in emergencies, you must give consent to receive medical treatment. Before giving your consent, you must be told what the treatment is for, why and in what way it will be helpful, whether it has any risks or likely side effects, what results are expected or possible, and whether there are any alternatives.

If you have questions, you should ask them and make sure you understand the answers. Then you should think about the information and consider it carefully. If you can and want to, get a second opinion from another healthcare provider. Talk it over with family or friends—and then make your choice and tell your decision to your healthcare provider.

YOUR RIGHT TO ACCEPT MEDICAL TREATMENT Once you have been fully informed about a proposed treatment, you have the right to accept. Sometimes a verbal “OK” is enough, or you may be asked to sign a consent form. This form can be complicated and detailed. If you are not sure what it all means, ask for an explanation and be sure you understand before you sign.

YOUR RIGHT TO REFUSE MEDICAL TREATMENT Once you have been fully informed about a proposed treatment, you have the right to refuse. You can refuse any medical treatment at any time for any reason, even if you might get sicker or even die as a result.

YOUR RIGHT TO MAKE YOUR WISHES KNOWN If you have preferences about what medical treatments you want to accept or refuse, you have the right to make those wishes known. And you have the right to expect that your wishes will be honored, even if you get so sick you can't communicate or make decisions. In order to make sure your wishes are respected, however, it is very important to discuss them with your family, your healthcare providers, other advisors or friends, and to write down your choices.

The written statements and documents you make to communicate your medical treatment decisions are called advance directives. In Colorado, there are three main types of advance directive: the Medical Durable Power of Attorney, the Living Will, and the CPR Directive. This booklet offers information and ready-to-use forms for all three. Other advance directive forms from other sources may be valid, too, if they follow Colorado law.

This booklet also briefly discusses the Medical Orders for Scope of Treatment (MOST). MOST is a summary of advance directives which, when signed by a healthcare professional, becomes a medical order set.

YOUR RIGHT TO APPOINT A SUBSTITUTE DECISION MAKER It can be very difficult to think ahead and imagine all the circumstances you might be in or the many healthcare decisions you might have to make. When people are very ill or badly injured, they are often unable to make or express their own decisions—they are incapacitated. Still, except in emergencies healthcare providers can't just go ahead with treatment without consent from the patient. If the patient can't give consent, someone else has to—but not just anybody else.

In some states, the law authorizes particular people in a particular order to act as substitute decision makers for an incapacitated patient: spouse first, adult children next, then parents, grandparents, siblings, etc. Colorado law does not have such a prioritized list of substitute decision makers. Instead, individuals, before they are incapacitated, should appoint a substitute decision maker, or healthcare agent.

MEDICAL DURABLE POWER OF ATTORNEY You appoint your healthcare agent by completing a Medical Durable Power of Attorney (MD-POA) form. An MDPOA form, along with more information about the MDPOA/healthcare agent, is provided in this booklet. A healthcare agent only has authority to make healthcare decisions. An MDPOA cannot pay your bills, buy or sell real estate or other items of property for you, manage your bank accounts, etc. For that, you need to appoint a Financial or General Durable Power of Attorney. Forms to appoint other powers of attorney are available free from various Web sites or office supply stores, but it is a good idea to consult an attorney first. Low-cost legal advice is available from the Colorado Bar Association, www.cobar.org, or 303.860.1115.

If you do not appoint a healthcare agent or MDPOA while you are able to make your own decisions, Colorado law offers two options: selection of a Proxy Decision Maker for Healthcare or appointment of a guardian.

PROXY DECISION MAKER FOR HEALTHCARE When a doctor has determined that you cannot make your own decisions, and if you have not appointed a healthcare agent, the doctor must gather together as many interested persons as possible. These are people who know you well and have a close interest in your well-being, including your spouse or partner, parents, children, grandparents, siblings, even close friends. Then the assembled group must choose one person to be your Proxy Decision Maker. Ideally, this person knows you and your wishes for treatment best. If your wishes are not known, the Proxy must act in your best interests.

The doctor must make a reasonable effort to tell you who the Proxy is, and you have a right to object to the person selected to be Proxy or to any of the Proxy's decisions. If you later regain the ability to make and express your own decisions, the Proxy is relieved of duty.

Anyone with a close interest in your care can be included in the group that selects the Proxy; no one can be deliberately excluded. However the membership of the group depends on whom the doctor knows to contact and whether they are available. This process is somewhat unusual in the healthcare field. If some Colorado healthcare providers do not know about it, they may just turn to whomever among your family and friends happens to be there at the time. This might work for the time being, but if there is any kind of conflict, a decision maker chosen in this way has no real legal standing.

Once the group of interested persons reaches agreement, the doctor then records the selection of the Proxy Decision Maker in your medical record. The Proxy has almost the same powers of decision making that you would have. The Proxy may consult with your healthcare providers, review your medical records, and make any and all decisions regarding your healthcare except one: A Proxy Decision Maker cannot decide to withhold or withdraw artificial nourishment (water and nutrients delivered by tube) unless two physicians, one of whom is trained in neurology, agree that artificial nourishment would only prolong the moment of your death. Also, the Proxy's authority tends to be limited to the timeframe of a particular medical crisis; it is not durable past the immediate need for healthcare decisions.

The Proxy must make an effort to consult with you about the decisions to be made and also must consult with the rest of the group. If the group cannot pick a Proxy to begin with, or if at any time the group cannot agree about particular decisions, the only option is for someone in the group to go to court to ask for appointment of a guardian.

GUARDIANS Guardians are appointed by the court to perform a certain set of duties on behalf of an incapacitated person. This person is called a ward or protected person. The law regards a person as being incapacitated when he or she is unable to make or communicate decisions concerning himself or herself. This may be due to mental illness, mental impairment, physical illness or disability, chronic use of drugs and/or alcohol, or other causes.

A court order might appoint a guardian to make medical care and treatment decisions or to manage the ward's financial affairs. A court might appoint a limited guardian to provide particular services for a specific length of time. Generally the duties of a guardian are to decide where the ward should live; to arrange for necessary care, treatment, or other services for the ward; and to see that the basic daily personal needs of the ward are met, including food, clothing and shelter.

Any person aged 21 or over, or an appropriate agency, may be appointed as a guardian. Frequently, guardians are members of the ward's family or close friends of the ward, but professional senior care managers and some county departments of Adult Protective Services may also serve as guardians.

Guardianship can be shared by more than one individual; for instance, one person handling medical decisions and another financial. A guardian is not required to provide for a ward out of his or her own money, nor is he or she required to live with the ward. In addition, a guardian is not responsible for a ward's behavior. It is important to know that, except in emergency situations, the court process to appoint a guardian may take several months.

THE MEDICAL ORDERS FOR SCOPE OF TREATMENT (MOST) form is a 1-page, 2-sided document that summarizes in check-box style choices for key life-sustaining treatments including CPR, general scope of treatment, antibiotics, and artificial nutrition and hydration. For each type of treatment, the patient may refuse treatment, request full treatment, or specify limitations.

The MOST is primarily intended for use by chronically or seriously ill persons in frequent contact with healthcare providers, or already living in a nursing facility. It is completed by the patient or authorized decision maker along with a healthcare provider who can explain what each of the choices means for that patient at that time. Then it is signed by the patient or healthcare agent/Proxy and a physician, advanced practice nurse, or physician's assistant. When signed, it becomes a medical order set, not an advance directive.

The MOST stays with the patient and is honored in any setting: hospital, clinic, day surgery, long-term care facility, assisted living residence, hospice, or at home. In this way, the MOST closes gaps in communication about treatment choices as patients transfer from setting to setting. The original is brightly colored for easy identification, but photocopies, faxes, and electronic scans are also valid.

The MOST does not replace or revoke advance directives. Choices on the MOST should be consistent with any advance directives the patient previously completed, but the MOST does not cover every treatment or instruction that might be addressed in an MDPOA or Living Will. The choices and directives documented there are still valid. The MOST overrules prior instructions only when there is a direct conflict. A section on the back prompts patients and providers to regularly review, confirm, or update choices based on changing conditions.

A MOST form is not included in this booklet; if you would like more information about the MOST form or program, please consult a healthcare provider or visit www.ColoradoAdvanceDirectives.com.

ORGAN AND TISSUE DONATION Any advance directive may include a written statement of your desire to donate organs or tissues. Please be aware that if you do wish to donate organs, your advance directive may be set aside for a time to allow your organs to be recovered before life-sustaining treatment is withdrawn (see section on the Living Will, page 11). If you refuse CPR, or cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, by executing a CPR directive (see page 13), you may not be able to donate organs, but you can still donate tissues, subject to some limitations of age, health status, and sexual orientation. For more information about organ and tissue donation, consult with your healthcare provider or contact Donor Alliance, www.DonorAlliance.org, or (303) 329-4747. If you do wish to donate organs or tissues, be sure your family knows of your decision, as they will be asked to give consent to the donation procedure—and they have the final say.

Medical Durable Power of Attorney

A MEDICAL DURABLE POWER OF ATTORNEY (MDPOA) is a document you sign naming someone to make your healthcare decisions if and when you are not able to. The person you name is called your healthcare agent. Your MDPOA can become effective immediately, or you can make it become effective only when you are unable to make your own medical decisions.

You can appoint anyone to be your healthcare agent as long as that person is at least 18 years old, mentally competent, and willing to be your agent. Your agent should also be someone who can confidently deal with lots of healthcare providers over what could be a long time. It is preferable to pick an agent who lives in the same state or even city as you do, and it's also a good idea to appoint one or two back-up agents, in case your first choice is not available or able to serve. Appointing two or more people as co-agents is not recommended.

Your healthcare agent has all the powers of decision making you do: He or she can consult with healthcare providers, review or get copies of your medical records, and make all necessary healthcare treatment and placement decisions. The agent must act according to his or her understanding of what your wishes and preferences would be. He or she must set aside his or her own values and preferences and do what you would do.

Therefore, it is very important to be sure your agent understands what your wishes are, what you consider to be acceptable, and when you would say no. Talk to your agent about your values, any religious or moral commitments you have, and your goals for treatment. What burdens of treatment (side effects, pain, nausea, fatigue, limitations on activity or thinking, etc.) are acceptable to you and which are not? What benefits do you hope the treatment will provide?

Do not assume that the person you pick to be your agent knows all of this, just because he or she knows you well. Studies have shown that even spouses who have been married for decades are often wrong when asked to guess what their partners would prefer! In fact, your spouse or life partner may not be the best choice of agent, just because of his or her close involvement in the outcome of your treatment. If you appoint your spouse as your agent, and then later you are divorced, legally separated, or your marriage is annulled, your former spouse is automatically removed as your agent unless expressly stated otherwise in your MDPOA.

You may put instructions into your MDPOA document to help guide your agent and your healthcare providers. A MDPOA form appears at the back of this booklet .

Your MDPOA does not need to be witnessed or notarized. However, most other states require witnesses, so if you plan to use your MDPOA in another state, it's a good idea to have it witnessed. You can cancel, or revoke, your MDPOA at any time, assuming you have the mental capacity to do so, and your agent can resign at any time. If you have not appointed a back-up agent and can't make decisions for yourself, then a Proxy Decision Maker must be selected or a guardian appointed by the court.

Living Will

A LIVING WILL is a document you sign telling your doctors to stop or not start life-sustaining treatments if you are in a terminal condition and can't make your own decisions or if you are in a persistent vegetative state (PVS). A terminal condition is one that is incurable or irreversible and for which life-sustaining treatment will only postpone the moment of death. Persistent vegetative state results from a severe brain injury and generally means that the person is alive and may appear to sleep and wake, but is completely unaware of his or her surroundings; cannot speak, drink, or eat; and may not be able to feel or react to pain.

A Living Will only goes into effect 48 hours after two doctors certify that you are in a terminal condition and can't make your own decisions or you are in PVS. Your doctors must make a good effort to notify persons close to you that this certification has been made and that they will withdraw or withhold life-sustaining treatment within two days. You can include a list of persons to be notified in the Living Will document, with their contact information. You can also include a list of persons authorized to talk to your doctors about your condition and care. These persons are not authorized to make any decisions about your care, however.

In Colorado, you may also designate in your Living Will that your doctors should stop or not start any tube feeding and other forms of artificial nutrition and hydration, once the terminal or PVS certification has been made, unless they consider it is necessary to provide comfort or relieve pain. You may also include other instructions about your care, but these instructions will only go into effect at the same time as the Living Will: when your doctors certify you are in a terminal condition and can't make your own decisions or you are in PVS. The Living Will is not the place to record general medical directives about your care in any condition that is not terminal or PVS. It is also not the place to record instructions about property or personal items.

Two competent adult witnesses must sign your Living Will. However, the witnesses cannot be your doctor or any employee of your doctor, any employee of the facility or agency providing your care, your creditors, or people who may inherit your money or property. Other patients or residents in the facility where you are receiving care can witness your Living Will as long as they are competent to do so.

Your doctors, Proxy Decision Maker, or guardian cannot override your Living Will. In the Living Will document or in the MDPOA document, you can give your healthcare agent the authority to override all or part of your Living Will. If you do not give your agent this authority, your Living Will cannot be revoked or overridden by your agent.

You can cancel or change your Living Will at any time. You can do this by destroying it, by signing a statement that you no longer want it, or you may prepare a new one. If you cancel or change your Living Will, you should tell your family, your doctor, and anyone who has a copy of it that it has been canceled or changed.

A Living Will form appears at the back of this booklet. This form is consistent with Colorado law. You don't have to consult a doctor or lawyer to complete a Living Will, although you might wish to seek medical or legal advice.
